MASTER AND WIFE KILLED

ACT OF PIRACY BY THE CREW OF PORTUGUESE BARK.

Spanish Man-of-Warsmen Capture the Vessel After Some Hours of Poor Shooting-Another Murder at Sea.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 12 .- Captain McCarthy, of the British steamer Trunkby, which arrived to-day from Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, reports that a few days before his arrival at Santa Cruz, the Brazilian bark Julianna Schoorer, from Rio Janeiro for Genoa, Italy, put in for provisions. The health authorities asked the master why there was but fifteen persons on board when the articles named seventeen as leaving Rio Janeiro. The captain said the others had died from yellow fever. When the vessel was released from quarantine and provisioned, one of the crew stated to one of the customs guard that the man in charge was not the master of the ship, but the mate, and that the mate had murdered the master and his wife on the voyage. The authorities sent boat crews from a small Spanish man-of-war in the harbor to bring the mate and crew ashore. The mate, who was a Swede, had suspected something, and he armed himself with a revolver and defled the whole of the five boats' crews of Spanish man-of-war's men to take him. The sailors, under orders of their officers, fusiladed the man and the vessel for five hours, during which time, it is said, 800 shots were fired. The mate was killed at last, having been shot several times. During the firing the crew jumped overboard and were rescued by the warship's boats In their excitement the Spaniards set fire to the bark, but as soon as they found the Swede dead they extinguished the Before the Trunkby left Santa Cruz, the bark was towed up to a berth near the steamer and remained there with a crew of man-of-war's men in charge. The bark was held as a pirate, but under protest from the Brazilian consul. The bark has previously hailed from Oporto, Portugal, which name had been painted out. There is no such name as Julianna Schoorer in Lloyd's register. There have since been numerous strikes, has been is a bark Julia III, of Oporto, and it is superseded by William Mack, of Wilkes- probable the murderer had observed the name and claimed Brazil as the vessel's nation. The matter had not been settled when the Trunkby sailed for Baltimore.

A MURDER AT SEA.

Seaman Stabs His Captain on the

Newfoundland Coast. ST. JOHNS, N. B., Nov. 12.-A murder at sea on the schooner J. B. Vandusen, of New York, was made known to-day by the receipt of a message from the vessel's mate to the owners' agent in this city. It stated that Captain Baisley had been stabbed by a sailor named Maxwell, had afterwards fallen overboard and had died in the ship's boat, which had put off to rescue him. As for the schooner it had disappeared in the darkness under conditions which made it seem probable that the murderer and the steward, the only men left on board, had got the schooner under way and headed her in toward the Nova Scotia coast. The schooner left this port, lumber laden, for New York late yesterday afternoon. The tragecy was evidently enacted in the Bay of Fundy within a few hours after clearing land. Captain Baisley belonged in this city. Maxwell, who, according to the telegram, did the stabbing, is also a St. ohns man and for several voyages sailed with Captain Baisley as his mate. The Schooner Located.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 12.-The schooner was finally located at Beaver harbor to-day. It seems that the vessel, under charge of the cook, Frank Snowden, was run toward Heaver harbor for an anchorage. On making that port, Snowden let go both anchors. At daybreak Snowden hailed the captain of another schooner, which was anchored near by, and said that there had been trouble on board. The captain who had been hailed was rather suspicious of what Snowden had told him, so he visited the captains of other schooners in the port and then went ashore. As there was no resident magistrate or port official in the settlement, the matter was referred to several best known residents, and several of hem went out to the Vanduzen. Cook Snowden asked them to go on board, which they did. Everything was in ship-shape, but on the deckload of lumber was a spot of blood. The cook was questioned closely as to what had happened and he said that Captain Baisley and Sailor Maxwell had a fight about dark last night, during which the captain had been knocked overboard, and had fallen. He further said the mate and another sailor immediately took the boat and rowed away in search of Captain Baisley. Their boat, the cook said, soon disappeared, and as he had taken the wheel of the schooner he kept her up the wind for some time, hoping that the boat would return. As the boat did not show up in a considerable length of time, Snowden said he got bearings, put the schooner on a course and made for a harbor. He ran in toward land until he made out anchor lights and let the anchor go, trusting to luck to be in a safe berth. After hearing the steward's story, the committee took charge of the schooner, pending instructions from her owner. Later was learned that the Vanduzen's boat,

> "Father Radzeszowski, who had been visiting me for two weeks, and myself, went to Philadelphia last Thursday morning, to transact some business. We determined to make a call upon Father Zaleski, who was not known to either of us. I sent up my card and Father Zaleski came down and invited us up to his quarters. Soon afterward the organist of the church came in and Father Zaleski sent him out for whisky and wine and oysters. We drank two glasses of whisky and finished a bottle of wine. Father Zaleski drank very heavily. While he was drinking Father Zaleski asked the organist for the change in the money which he had given him, to purchase the whisky, wine and oysters. The organist told Father Zaleski he would talk to him about the change in the morning, indicating that the money he had given him to purchase the articles had not been sufficient. Father Zaleski became angry and demanded the change, showing a great deal temper. Father Radzeszowski and myself chided Father Zaleskl about his conduct and he quieted down.

"During the evening, several ladies connected with the choir of the church called, and consulted with Father Zaleski about music for Sunday's mass. They were treated to candies, and their pastor gave them some money, I don't know how much, or for what purpose 't was given' them. SUNDAY RACES IN CUBA

PAPERS ASSERT THEY ARE A GOOD THING FOR THE PEOPLE.

Plan to Pension Gen. Gomez Is Proposed-Union Workmen Meet and Eulogize Haymarket Anarchists.

HAVANA, Nov. 12 .- The local newspapers object to the criticisms made by some American journals upon Sunday racing in Havana. They point out that after mass on Sunday all Latin countries take a holiday, and assert that if the Americans wish the Cubans to popularize some sport as a substitute for bull fighting. Sundays must be devoted to it, because saints' days are kept strictly for religious observances, and at other times there is no great number of Cubans wealthy enough to forsake business for the sake of amusement. The Discussion, which urges the high American officers in the island to continue to patronize a "noble sport," says: "When seven thousand people brave the prospects of a rain such as was before us on last racing day, among them the very best people of Havana, their course is sufficient proof that the attitude of the American officers is the attitude of the American officers is In the second part of the programme she heartily indorsed by our representatives of sang the "Bell Song," from "Lakme."

The Patria proposes that ten of the leading municipalities should each give General Gomez $30 a month, as his health is poor and he is in need of funds. The Cuban Pelletier was fatally burned. Viau & Frere | newspapers are urged to support the proposal, which "is small return indeed for the

About 300 persons attended the proceedings at the headquarters of the unions. To each was handed a special memorial number of the Jornada, the labor organ. Its leading editorial referred to Lingg, who committed suicide in his cell with a fulminate cartridge as immortal" who preferred to blow his head to atoms and thus disappoint his murderous would-be executioners." It called upon all honest workers to imitate the "martyrs." Many heated speeches were made, the speakers abusing capital and the tyranny of the rich and calling upon workmen to have faith in the future.

TWO SHOCKING TRAGEDIES.

Murders by an Insane Negro in a Minnesota Town. ROUND LAKE, Minn., Nov. 12.-Two shocking tragedies occurred here to-night within a few minutes of each other. N. K. Graves was shot and fatally wounded by Dick Dickerson, a negro, aged about fifty years, who had been regarded as crazy. The negro fired through a window. The shooting created much excitement and Arthur Maxwell was among the number who gathered at the scene. In ten minutes after the first shot Dickerson rushed up to a point behind a tree and again fired. Maxwell fell to the ground and in a moment caped. Mr. Graves can hardly survive the It is thought that the negro entertained an insane hatred toward Mr. St. Clair, at whose place the shooting occurred, and was seeking to murder him when he shot Graves. Every effort is being made to capture Dick-

SLEEPI'G-CAR POSSIBILITIES. Consolidation Not Likely to Increase Charges.

Philadelphia Press. The Pullman and Wagner consolidation is a matter of interest not only as a great merger of capital but to about eight millions of people who annually use sleeping cars in this country. It practically places the business of caring for that part of the traveling public who make long journeys and travel at night in the hands of the Pullman company, in which the Vander-bilts will have a large ownership. Organized in 1867, this company, under the masterly management of George M. Pullman, developed the means by which traveling in this country was made comfortable and even luxurious. Mr. Pullman did not make the first sleeping car, but he improved Mr. Woodruff's invention, and not only conferred a great boon on travelers and tourists, but made a fortune and created a corporation which earned more than $10,000,000 last year and which has paid regular dividends of 8 per cent. without a break for a quarter of a century, besides many extra dividends, one of which was $20 per share in cash. When he died he controlled the sleeping car business of this country, except that done by the Wagner company

the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the New York, New Haven & Hartford, which railroads have their own sleeping cars. The operations of the Pullman company cover 121,000 miles of railroad, and it has nearly 2,500 cars in use. The acquisition of the Wagner sleepin car company by the Pullman gives it ful control of this peculiarly American method of transportation. The Wagner company was owned by the Vanderbilts and their associates, and had no competition on the Vanderbilt railroads. The company owns some six hundred or seven hundred cars, ard is a close family corporation of some There was never strictly any competition between the Wagner and the Pullman. The Wagner's tenure of the business of the Vanderbilt roads was fixed, and that company has not been able to make serious inroads on the Pullman's territory. It has been supposed that the consolidation may be prejudicial to the interests of the public, inasmuch as it gives the Pullman Company full control of the sleepingcar service on nearly every important line in the country. It must be remembered however, that this control is a matter of arrangement with progressive American railroad lines, contracts being made for a comparatively short term of years. The great companies will naturally see that there is improvement in the service rather than a falling off, and the experience the public has had with the Pullman Company warrants the belief that that corporation will go ahead rather than fall behind. For a generation it has spent large sums of money in improving cars and making new which has been successful since it created its business. Under no circumstances is it likely that the charges for service will be increased The consolidation will naturally afford opportunities for economies, and in two or three ways it may be made advantageous to the traveling public. It will be possible to run cars a longer distance without change in many parts of the country than heretofore, though the service in this respect has been thought very complete. Under the old regime it was often necessary in making long journeys by certain routes to change cars, especially where connection with the Wagner service was made. These breaks of journey will not be necessary when the new company completes its plans. It will also be possible to bring together a larger num-ber of cars on the occasions of the assembling of large numbers of people from distant points. Every one who has attended a presidential inauguration, for instance, will

Philadelphia Record. Mr. Bryan sowed ante-election speeches n Nebraska as thick as leaves in Vallombrosa, and he has not been without his reward. He gathered a harvest of votes. But when he was asked to what especial issue he ascribed his victory he could not determine. Probably the voters would be equally at fault. They were, in all likeli-hood, wrought upon by the flood of Populistic eloquence. It is related of William C. Preston, of Kentucky, that upon one oc-casion his impassioned oratory seemed to have carried one of his auditors beyond all bounds of demonstrative applause. The hurrahing partisan when asked what so particularly excited his admiration stopped long enough to explain: "Oh, I can't hear word he says, but don't he do the motions splendid."
